One such craft brewer is contract brewer 7venth Heaven in Minneapolis, MN. They have been able to expand their business over the last decade by virtue of some deft business practices, including dabbling in crowdfunding, and partnering with local breweries. 7th Heaven founder Joe Wehrs says he decided to take advantage of crowdfunding for the business after feeling some buyer's remorse about the growth of his company. "I started the business in 1999," Wehrs says. "We were one of the first contract brewers back in the late '90s, and craft beer was just starting to hit and... it was kind of a black hole. We raised [$3.2 million in] equity at the time, and that was it." Now, at the age of 52, Wehrs says he felt this was the perfect time to give back to the industry, and they dabbled in crowdfunding before deciding to go all-in. "I saw that crowdfunding was on the rise. What attracted us to that was not just that you had easy funding, but a few things, including that you could start and finish in a few months," he says. "'Write a check', you could do that. And it was very flexible: you could fund it over a certain amount of time." In March, the company launched a crowdfunding campaign on Ind
