Mesquite police said the man has been charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon after the woman's injuries were not life-threatening. Police originally told NBC5 a weapon was used, but that turns out to be false. The weapon was a broken beer bottle that struck the woman in the forehead. She has a scar on her forehead, but it's not as severe as the sound. "I was just trying to get away from him," the woman said. "She was scared, you could tell. She looked like she was scared," her friend said. "You saw the shoes. He's punched her in the face. He was so mad. She went down and he tried to hit her with a bottle, that's a bottle full of booze." As NBC5's Blake Davis pointed out, the place that calls itself Le Campus is a basement-level hostel that was squeezed between a bowling alley and a movie theater. "It's a horrible place. I'm actually scared to go there," the friend said. "It makes me scared to walk in there. It really does." Police say the attack was random and caught the victim by surprise as she was headed into a Le Campus employee's office. "I was just walking in and then all of a sudden he punched me," the woman said. The 42-year-old said she had been in the apartment for less than 24 hours. She was visiting her son, who was also staying there, when her neighbor asked her to come upstairs to the office. "And it seems like he was upset because he said, 'You're making a mess. Are you gonna make a mess?'" she said. The woman's cell phone started ringing, but she soon lost the phone and became worried. When she got to the office, the man followed her and called her a "slut" and a "whore," the
